Falling Through The Cracks – The Greg Price Story

Overview:

Falling Through The Cracks, Greg's Story is a 30 minute film showing the audience what Greg encountered during his fateful journey through the health system. The setting of the film is partly in his home town, and with representatives of his family and the providers he met with. It is based on the Continuity of Patient Care Study produced by the Health Quality Council of Alberta, along with other investigations and the family's personal knowledge.

It is a very high quality film, done by excellent cast and crew including Andrew Wreggitt as the writer and who has numerous credits in the Canadian film industry and Dean Bennet who also is well known, in particular for his directing of the Heartland television series.

The Price family produced the film, with the great support of Dr. Ward Flemons providing the medical guidance on the film, and who was the lead investigator for the HQCA report. It is the hope of the Price family that showing Greg's story will provide additional motivation and support for needed positive changes in the health system.
