If you have / will be receiving an email with additional details about our study. This project is an ethics-approved, educational research initiative of the Inner City Health and Wellness Program. One of our program's goals is to better serve inner city populations through effective education and training for health care professionals. This research study is an important part of this goal. McGill Journal of Medicine - Accepting Submissions

The McGill Journal of Medicine is a student-led, peer-reviewed journal that aims to provide students with a platform to publish on all aspects of medicine. We are currently accepting submissions for our Spring 2017 issue with a special focus on Primary Care in Quebec. No other discipline is as broad and all-encompassing as Family Medicine and we hope your submissions will reflect the diversity of the specialty. Whether it be discussing the merits of the periodic health exam, comparisons between different provincial healthcare systems, the challenges and rewards of rural practice, medical education of primary care practitioners or any one of numerous other topics, family medicine research aims to improve patient health at all points in their lives and through multiple different avenues.

We are currently accepting original research articles, reviews, case reports, Crossroad and fine art submissions. Submissions are evaluated on a rolling basis. Find more information and submit here.

C2017 Focus Group Participation

Participation in this study will involve a one-time focus group discussion with other medical students from your year, as well as a moderator from our team. The discussion will include questions about the types of learning resources and learning methods you have found valuable in your clerkship experience.

Faculty Updates

Advice on Using Non-AH/AHS Information Systems

The use of technology in healthcare is a rapidly emerging field. Many of us already use information systems provided by Alberta Health (AH) or Alberta Health Services (AHS) such as Netcare, eClinician, and IMPAX, to assist with patient care. However, many other healthcare software products (hereafter referred to as information systems), web based and/or apps for personal devices, are also available for use in inpatient and ambulatory care settings. Before using a non-AH/AHS hosted information system that would contain confidential health information, you MUST be aware of important privacy policies and procedures and your responsibility to comply with the Health Information Act and other privacy laws.
