SAGE: Collaborations through Data Sharing

Hannah Lloyd-Jones (Project Coordinator, PolicyWise for Children & Families) will discuss how SAGE (Secondary Analysis to Generate Evidence) can support researchers to share and access data related to health and social well-being in an ethical and legal manner.

SAGE is a collaborative data repository platform that connects stakeholders through the secondary use of data and increases the value of data by encouraging its use in new ways to inform social policy and practice. Lessons learned from the early implementation of SAGE as well as future plans to support not for profit data and knowledge mobilization will be discussed.
