Copyright Information

PLEASE NOTE

Canadian copyright law governs the making of photocopies, scans, or other reproductions of copyright-protected materials. Certain copying may be an infringement of copyright law.

Copying a substantial portion of any material protected by copyright is lawful when:

1. The copying counts as fair dealing or falls under a specific exception set out in the Copyright Act; or
2. The copying has been authorized by the copyright owner.

The University of Alberta has made copiers and scanners available on campus for the convenience of users, but it is not responsible for the copies made by those users.

Copying by University of Alberta faculty and staff in the course of their employment is governed by the Use of Copyright Materials Policy (UAPPOL). The University of Alberta's Fair Dealing Guidelines are intended to apply only to copying made under this policy.
